Perry County Demos Go For Perkins By Large Majority

Perry County Democrats, along with the rest of the 7th Congressional District, backed incumbent Representative Carl D. Perkins in a big way in Tuesday's primary, giving him a whopping 1,396 votes out of 1522 that were cast here.

His opponent, Ann Hall, collected only about 4,000 votes in the entire District, 126 of them here.

The race for the Republican nomination for the same office was a little closer, as Walter VanHoose came out on top to earn his chance at Perkins' seat in November, helped along by 169 Perry County voters.

Only 412 Perry County Republicans turned out to the polls Tuesday.

One hundred eighty voted for Tom Layne in his losing bid for the nomination, while David Aronowicz collected 50.

The Perry County Republican choice of a nominee for Judge of the Court of Appeals was also the winner in the District, as Robert B. Bird got the party nod, backed by 148 Perry County voters.

Seventh District Democrats nominated Edward P. Hill, though Perry County's Democrats favored Fred B. Redwine.

Redwine got 451 votes here in his losing cause, while winner Hill was second in the county with 301 votes.

With 1522 Democrats and 412 Republicans showing up at the polls, the total voter turnout in this primary came to 1,934, out of a roughly estimated 15,000 registered voters in Perry County.

Besides the light vote, another indication of the general lack of interest in the primary was the highly unusual fact that once the polls were closed at five p.m., few people bothered to wait around at the Clerk's office to find out results of the tabulations.

Election officials had the votes counted by about 8 p.m. Tuesday.

On the Democrat side, the precinct with the lightest turnout was No. 8, at Eversole, where only two Democrats showed up to cast their ballots.

Heaviest Democrat voting was at Letts Creek where 72 here were celebrated by separate ballots were cast. This precinct was followed by Chavies with 71, Viper, 71, and Hardburly with 70.

Low Republican turnout was at Rogers Branch and Lost Creek where only three party votes were cast in each community. At Hardburly only 4 Republican votes were registered, in sharp contrast to the 70 Democrats who voted there.

Highest Republican voting came here in the city, with 24 ballots cast at the Red Cross Office Precinct 30.

The community of Barger, Precinct 7, also saw 24 Republicans come out, but after that trailer-home on Main Street but the city precincts again attracted most Republican votes with 22 cast at the county attorney's office and 15 at the fire department precinct.

In Hazard, the voting breakdown by precinct went this way: Walkertown, precinct 26, 70 and M. C. Napier 93.

The Bulldogs reached the finals by beating Whitesburg 7-0 and M. C. Napier 9-3.

Craft said last week that enthusiasm for Little League baseball was running high this year.

The League's annual Tag Sale met with a warm response from the public, more boys in than the League could accommodate wanted to play, and some parents have even been turning out to watch the afternoon practice sessions at Collins Field.

This memorial service is for those men who gave their all that we might continue to live in a country like we do.

If you are one who has lost a loved one in service, the commander would like for you to send his name to, Commander Davaughn Bolen, Box 555, Hazard, Kentucky, so that they may keep their list accurate.

In Hazard, the voting breakdown by precinct went this way: Walkertown, precinct 26, 70 and M. C. Napier 93.

The Bulldogs reached the finals by beating Whitesburg 7-0 and M. C. Napier 9-3.

Ex-Navy Men Offered Chance To Re-Enlist

Ex-Navy men are being encouraged to consider returning to Navy life in a new and highly instructive program.

Expanding the provisions of the Selective Conversion and Retention (SCORE) Program to include ex-Navy men who have been out of service from three months up to four years, Navy hopes to encourage re-enlistment in the RESCORE Program.

Since these former Navy men are already trained and familiar with Navy life, they are excellent career prospects and the offering of guaranteed technical training of their choice is considered a sound procedure.

In particular, those men who left the Navy due to dissatisfaction in type of duty assignment, poor advancement opportunity, and inability to secure training in a technical rating, are encouraged to apply.

Applicants for the RESCORE Program must have been discharged for more than three months but less than four years from active duty as a member of the Regular Navy or Naval Reserve.

He must have been recommended for re-enlistment by his last duty command and must re-enlist for a minimum of four years. Greater training benefits are guaranteed to the applicant enlisting for six years.

Interested ex-Navy men may determine their individual qualification by contacting their nearest Navy Recruiting Office.

Major benefits of enlisting via RESCORE Program is the guarantee of training in a field of the applicant's own choosing prior to enlisting, retention of pay grade held at time of discharge from the Navy and assignment to the technical school in the field of applicants choice.

For more details about this very important program see your Navy Recruiter at the Post Office Building Room 23.

Children Attend Pre-School Party At Walkertown

Approximately 60 children, accompanied by their parents, attended a pre-school party Tuesday afternoon, May 19, from 2 to 3 p.m. at the Walker town Cafeteria.

As the children registered, they were given party hats of assorted pastel colors with 1964 printed on the front and a name plate.

Mr. William Browning, principal of the school, welcomed the newcomers and gave them information about getting ready for school. A leaflet entitled, "What a Child Should Know Before He Enters School", was issued to the parents.

Mr. Browning assured the parents that they didn't need a passing grade to enter. He explained that the new addition of the school would be in use this fall and he was looking forward to a great year.

The first grade teachers were introduced to the group and the party was turned over to Mrs. Anne Sampson.

Following a group activity period, the children and parents were served refreshments.

Mrs. Sampson was assisted by Mrs. Elsie Brown and Mrs. Opal Eversole, first grade teachers, and Mrs. Ernest Pennington, Mrs. Pat Moore, Mrs. John Caltri, and Mrs. Monroe Noble, home room mothers.

Mustang leads the stampede the big Ford started. This has been the hottest sales year in Ford Division history. We have a winner in the Super Torque Ford, a car so well built, so predictably tough, that competition-modified Fords took eleven of the last twelve NASCAR 500-mile races. Ford sales are up 17% this year. We have a luxury car that's taken off like a skyrocket: Thunderbird, with sales up 68%. Falcon is selling almost as many cars as Valiant and Chevy II combined. Fairlane continues to be a favorite in its own field. Now comes Mustang... turning the trend to Ford into a downright stampede. Mustang, by any measure of sales or excitement, is the most successful new car ever introduced in America—ever. When you see a stampede, it makes sense to find out what started it. That's something only your Ford Dealer can tell you about.

LADY WHO NOW HEARS AGAIN TELLS OF "THE SHEER JOY OF HEARING"

The other day Beltone received a "fan letter" from a lady who had recently been fitted with Beltone hearing glasses.

What was it like for her—being able to hear again after years of silence? Here are her own words:

"It was as if I had been away for a long time and had returned home to a delightful housewarming. I was tempted to stop strangers on the street and ask them to say something just for the sheer joy of hearing!"

Yes, hearing again can be "sheer joy." And it's one of the rich rewards of my work with Beltone that I'm able to bring this joy to so many people.

You can hear clearly again if you've suffered a hearing loss. Nowadays, almost every such loss can be corrected.

Why not drop in soon to discuss your hearing problem... without any cost or obligation? See the amazingly small hearing aids Beltone has available to help you.

Or, I'll be glad to come and see you. Just give me a call or drop me a note and we'll arrange a test for you right in your own home.

Folks since so many of you are really in the planting mood at this time of year, I predict this so far has been one of the finest growing seasons I have seen for many a day. Just a few items that I am sure that you never know of, neither did I until I received a little Bulletin in the Mail a few days ago, telling me that May 21st will be the beginning one of the oldest and longest weeks in the year. It is also the beginning of the INTERNATIONAL PICKLE WEEK, which will last ten days. This is because that most of the free countries are members of this Pickle Organization. Also in this bulletin, they tell me that pickles VITAMINS, also they retain them, also they tell me that it is a very essential daily nutritive needs, that an ordinary dill pickle only contains FIVE CALORIES, this should be interesting to you that are trying to shake off a few pounds. Also I was told that your body contains about one pound of salt. If you are a hard worker and perspire a lot you will need to eat PICKLES. Yes, also that Pickles are easy to digest, they are rich in acetic and lactic acid. To this report states that over 15 Billion pickles are consumed each year in the making of pickles, this in the United States alone. Folks, this is more than I had ever heard of the value of pickles in my entire lifetime. I know one thing I have been eating them for many, many years. Now since we have learned so much value can come from the lowly cucumber, I would suggest that here in County and area why can't we induce one of these Pickle Manufacturers to come into our section and set up shop. I do know that any type of pickle fruit can be raised here in Eastern Ky. We have the type of ground that will raise cucumbers in any size you will need so I personally invite THE PICKLE PACKERS INTERNATIONAL Corp. To investigate the possibilities here in Eastern Ky. This could develop into something in regard to cash crop. Personally I only plant two hills of cucumbers each year of the hybrid type, I have them going to waste, plus all I give away. Folks it is something to think of. So I will suggest that you help sustain in the help of this week in May 21 through 30th as INTERNATIONAL PICKLE WEEK. In the meantime start thinking what it could mean to our area. If you can't raise cucumbers, to me you are a poor gardener, or either your soil needs a good testing. Folks, its food for thought.

LORD BLESS MY HIDE

I reckon it comes about this time each year, yes it is Hatching Jacks time, don't think I ever noticed so many different designs in them, it looks like they are now made for the short, the skinny or fat ones, they all seem to have one that looks real nice. So many colors that seem to blend in with this season of the year. Yes, our trees and flowers are taking on those various colors, guess the hatching jacket was fashioned after old mother nature. I reckon that is the reason that in modern days we have by-passed the Mother Hubbard skirts and other such wearing apparel. Also the passing of the Granny that attended these type frolics. Many years ago it was considered a real gathering to attend one of these frolics, yes as they were known then. Didn't cost too much to bring a young'en in

BOOK OF HAZARD

You that haven't seen a new or maybe I should say old record of the beginning of Hazard, Ky., it has recently been published by two Hazard concerns, the People's Bank and the Hazard Herald. You that are interested in your community and region will really enjoy reading of what and how your community looked many years ago. It is a new publication, and I am confident that any of you will really enjoy it very much. It will bring many of you that are new as well as the old timers up to date on what has transpired over a period of a few short years in regard to the progress that Hazard and the region you love and live in. Some times I often wonder why that many such publications of this type can't be combined to make one volume. Our history of our area has been so spotty but with each such type publication it starts to clarify the memories of many that knew Hazard in its very beginning. Few years ago the Daughters of America published a book of Perry County. With all these being condensed into one large volume it would really make a nice History of our region.

THANKS TO YOU

Communications-Gap

Several people who commented on the Roscoe Holcomb article in last Thursday's Herald expressed genuine surprise that Perry County had a man who had earned for himself a reputation as a genuine folk artist in far away cities and states while remaining unknown and unpraised by his neighbors. How can this be? seemed to be the question that was on everybody's mind who became interested in Holcomb after the Herald article brought him to local public attention.

Well, how can this be?

That question is of fundamental importance to all of us who live in Perry County, and particularly so to those of us who live here in Hazard. For, when looked at a certain way, the fact that that question needs answering points up the general, and historic, lack of communication between the citizens of this town and this county.

That such a communications-gap exists between the town of Hazard and the county of Perry can hardly be denied. Examples of it can be found just about anywhere you care to look. Aside from situations such as Holcomb's, where a man of talent is unappreciated in his own county seat, other examples manifest themselves on every hand.

It is apparent each time a group of city folks try to organize a county-wide clean-up campaign and don't seem to get much cooperation. It shows when a newsman introduces himself as being from Hazard and finds a sudden cold-shouldered barrier before him. It shows in the bitterness of the rivalries of high school athletic teams in competition. It shows in the general impression so many townsmen have of the country as a unemployed welfare bum, and in the impression so many countians have of Hazard as the place to go to pay high prices for merchandise and then get thrown in jail for perhaps weaving once as he emerges from a Main Street tavern.

To many rural residents, Hazard is the snooty, unfriendly place where the courthouse is, while on the other hand, rural Perry County is something Hazard is often slightly ashamed of because tourists have to cross it to get inside the city limits. A great many rural residents wish that the likes of Hazard didn't even exist to clutter up their natural landscape. And some Hazardites wish with all their hearts that they could reply to those in New York and Washington, D. C., who ask what county Hazard is in: "Fayette!"

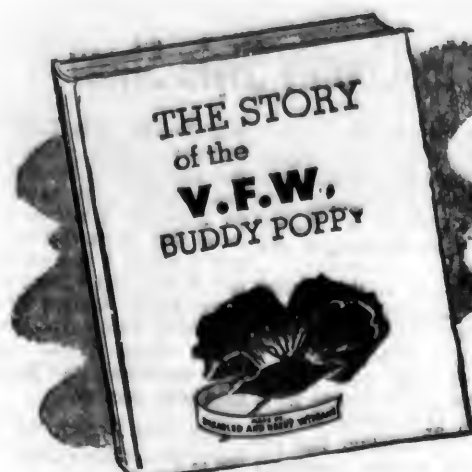

Though many of the accusations the two communities hurl at each other have enough basis in fact to make it plain how the accusations arose in the first place, it is unfortunate that each community seems to see the worst features of the other, instead of the best. As a consequence, we all suffer because of our failure to communicate. The trend toward separation of the county and the county seat definitely needs reversing. And, it would seem, the responsibility for initiating the reversal, for opening up new avenues of inter-community communication and cooperation lies with the town: Hazard.

For many years, Hazard has been engaged in an intense drive to improve and uplift itself from the doldrums of obsolete systems and facilities, and it has come a long way in its drive, thanks to the high caliber of its local leadership. Hazard has gained state-wide and even national attention for the way it has fought to overcome economic and natural disasters. A list of all that the town has accomplished in the last fifteen years is not necessary here. That list has been compiled several times, and virtually memorized by all those interested in Hazard's growth.

But where the town has failed, it would seem, is in the way it has apparently forgotten where it is, and how lucky it is to be there. Hazard has a burning desire to be as good as any small city in the nation, and that it has come far toward that goal does not need defending. But in the drive to be as good as other cities, is it not true that much of Hazard's effort is to be identical to those cities as well, to copy, right down the line, the habits, speech, styles, even building architecture and store-front design of a hundred other towns across the land, all of which look so much alike you can't tell one from the other?

If so, then this is a mistake. For, this approach amounts to a rejection of Hazard's heritage which is one of pride and individuality, for the sake of, let's face it, being just like everybody else. Once the time comes when Hazard looks and acts the same as all other towns of similar size across the land, it will have indeed lost something irreplaceable: its own identity.

This is not to suggest that Hazard back up a generation, or quit striving to improve itself. Hazard can be as good as any other place without being just like it. What it does suggest is that Hazard pay more attention to the area in which it lies, to be proud of that area, the rural area, that is so rich in its own unique, individual culture. Hazard should be immensely proud that it is the seat of Perry County, Kentucky. And this pride should become self-evident in a new effort by the town's churches, businesses, government, civic organizations and individuals to draw closer to the county people. It could learn a lot by doing so.

Dear Editor:

I don't guess you remember me, but I am sure you knew my father, Mr. Ebb Epperson, who was with Interstate Finance for so many years.

There were five of us children and all of us were born and raised in and around Hazard. Now, both our mother and father are deceased, and all of us are scattered around. Hazard is still our home, though.

We are only (my husband and myself, along with Robert, who is only 16 and is making his home with us) are going to return to Hazard the first of June, as my husband is graduating from Kentucky Wesleyan College this month.

You can bet your life that I never miss an edition of THE HERALD, it may not be the biggest paper in the state, but I know one thing, it is the best. It's better than any letter from home, because you find out all the little things, that friends forget to write.

V.F.W. Buddy Poppy Sale

The local V.F.W. Post and its Auxiliary will soon be asking our citizens to wear a BUDDY POPPY. We hope our citizens will respond generously to this appeal.

There is a growing school of thought that the government does necessary for the welfare and comfort of disabled veterans and their dependents by providing hospitals and medical services for thousands of them each year. In a large measure this may be true. Certainly no finer care can be provided than that furnished by our Veterans Administration hospitals.

But there is more to the problem than mere creature comforts for those who by reason of their service to the Nation have need of hospitalization. A hospital can be a cold place indeed without a frequent handshake, a cheery hello, and the small gift provided largely by dedicated members of veterans organizations who regularly visit these hospitals. It is in this field the familiar Buddy Poppy accomplishes so much.

It is heartwarming, too, to realize that one cent from the sale of each Buddy Poppy goes to maintain the V.F.W. National Home for Widows and Orphans of Veterans at Easton Rapids, Michigan. These pennies our citizens contribute each year have helped maintain this outstanding Home, where hundreds of orphans of veterans have been housed, clothed, educated and grown to maturity as useful citizens.

We hope our citizens will respond generously when asked by members of the V.F.W. and its Ladies Auxiliary to help them "honor the dead by helping the living." There can be a lot of satisfaction in wearing a Buddy Poppy.

Attitude Toward Senior Citizens

When the month of May ends this Saturday, the national Senior Citizen's Month will draw to a close as well. During this month, all across the country, communities have sponsored programs of one sort or another in an attempt to pay homage to those elderly people among us who have, during their long years, contributed so much of themselves to the strengthening of the basic fabric of all communities everywhere.

As Abraham Lincoln said in dedicating the national cemetery at Gettysburg to the honored dead who fell on that battlefield, it is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. It is even more fitting and proper now, in 1964, for the younger generations of America to pause and honor, while they are yet alive, yet productive, yet valuable to the community, their Senior Citizens.

All too often the tendency is to simply write off an individual once he retires from the work that has occupied him most of his life, to place him on the dusty shelf of old age as soon as he shows a bit of gray in his hair.

In this respect Americans could well look to the Orient for an example of the proper way to look on those of their fellows who have grown old. Oriental custom decrees that rather than hunt a man aside because an accumulation of years has slowed and weakened his body, that man should rather be held in high respect because that same accumulation of years has added to the man's store of knowledge, has brought him wisdom based on a life-time of experience in the world, and is therefore to be revered and honored by the young.

This attitude, if it ever existed in this country, has come dangerously close to disappearing, as the focus of national attention is more and more being cast upon the very young. But hopefully, there are some signs up the horizon to indicate a new awareness and appreciation of our Senior Citizens by their descendants. The Senior Citizen's Month that is now almost finished is one of those signs. Let us hope that others will appear, that paying respect to the elderly for the wisdom and experience they represent will become a year-around gesture that all the young can make instead of but one month in a year.

Herald-ings

by Mariha M. Nolan

Last Thursday we went to Jackson along with thousands of others from far and near to see "Lady Bird" dedicate a new gymnasium and to see first hand a number of other improvements in and near Jackson. It seems that on all sides of the Breathitt County Seat there are signs of progress. We might add there are also signs of continued progress in many places between Jenkins and Campbell. At Whitesburg houses are being removed or torn down in readiness for a stretch of the New Mountain Parkway which will be extended from the city limits to Ison a distance of approximately seven miles to the junction KY 7 and KY 15.

Many sub-standard houses have signs reading, "This is an Urban Renewal Project." Mr. Don Brown, supervisor for the New Project states that work is about to begin on the new construction.

Last, but by no means least a giant machine has made signs on Yellow Creek testing the ground in readiness for the construction of the Garr Creek Dam, which Congressman Perkins has assured us is to become a reality in the next few years.

Locally sub-standard houses located near the Mt. Mary Hospital are at present being torn down to make way for more modern structures.

Another long over due and much welcomed removal is the old boarding house building on North Main Street being gradually removed by its owners. This building even reveals a grand looking brick which has been submerged by the ugliness of its neighbor far too long. Congratulations is due the town of Hazard and the owners of this building for making way for bigger and better things.

Even the old Herald building is undergoing a painting and general clean up job as well as The Eagle Printing Co. in Whitesburg which is owned by the Herald owners. We feel making the best of what we have and encouraging all along the line if not new buildings, sprucing up the ones we have is the way to make our whole area look up.

Die A Little Every Day

By LAWRENCE FISHER

Paul Eberhardt was sick to death of his affair with Virginia Frealey. What began as one of his most exciting conquests had become routine and boring.

It had always been easy for Paul to break up an affair. He simply walked out, turning his back on the tears and pleading. But he could not walk out on Virginia. She happened to be the wife of Dr. Walter Frealey, Dean of the University Medical School where Paul was in his last year as a student. "If ever you leave me," Virginia promised, "I shall tell my husband about us, and that, darling, will be the absolute end of your future!"

No, he couldn't leave her, because more than anything else in the world, Paul wanted to be a doctor.

She sat beside him now as he drove the big Buick back to town after another of their nights. It was very early in the morning, and they had the road to themselves. He pushed the gas pedal as far as it would go. Ninety-five . . . much too fast for the little girl who darted out on the road from out of nowhere. Rubber shrieked on the blacktop as Paul braked the car. For a split second he looked into the child's shock-widened eyes. Then he felt the sickening impact, and saw the little figure hurtle up and sideways, into a ditch. He heard Virginia scream. Then her foot raked down his leg—and the car shot ahead. Paul kicked at her, but she kept her foot on the gas.

"My God, Virginia," he cried as they sped toward town, "that little girl—do you know what we've done?"

"I know what you've done," Virginia said, her voice cold and precise. "Don't forget you were driving."

Authority to Ensure Enforcement of Strip-Mine Law Begins June 18

By Paul R. Jordan

Director of Information and Education
Kentucky Department of Conservation

In signing the new strip mine law last March, Governor Edward T. Breathitt acted quickly to ensure its strict enforcement, beginning June 18. He gave Robert Montgomery the primary authority for enforcement, elevating the 43-year-old Woodford County landowner from Assistant to Deputy State Commissioner of Conservation.

Montgomery girded for the big job ahead, at the outset overhauling the State Division of Strip Mining and Reclamation. He is expanding its enforcement structure with highly-trained inspectors and, to keep down misunderstanding, is defining the new law to both operators and conservation leaders.

Montgomery went to Pennsylvania and studied that State's Strip-Mine Law, considered a National model by conservationists and sportsmen. Though the Kentucky law is milder than the Pennsylvania law, their goals are identical:

—To preserve both economic and esthetic values by ensuring restoration of stripped land and the protection of adjacent properties.

To prevent stream pollution from acid drainage or siltation and to protect waterable levels.

Specifically, Kentucky's new law requires more extensive reclamation work by coal operators; increases the amounts of performance bonds and acreage fees, and compels operators to file an acceptable plan of reclamation before a permit is issued by the state.

For the first time, the law includes access roads as part of strip-mine operations. Regulations now being prepared will set standards for their grading, drainage, and vegetation. In many instances, Montgomery said, access roads often do as much—or even more damage to the land as strip mining.

State laws regulating strip mining to a lesser degree have existed since 1954. The source of conflict simmers down to economics: the operators, especially the smaller outfits, object to the expense of restoring overburden—surface land stripped from atop coal seams which, if not reclaimed, causes erosion, slides, and stream pollution.

The hope for a superior and economical way to reclaim stripped land lies in a research project at the Berea College Experiment Station. For one thing, these studies should reveal the best type of deep-rooted trees to hold back overburden and reduce erosion and flooding.

Despite the usual furor, the 1964 law passed the Legislature with only one dissenting vote. In signing it, Governor Breathitt pledged the full power of his office to bring about complete compliance with the law and regulations defining grading requirements. "I am confident that this bill takes a big step forward in assuring a sound reclamation program, and at the same time, does not inflict an undue hardship on the industry," he said.

According to Montgomery, the coal operators—about 100 in Eastern Kentucky and 50 in the Western sector—are conforming with the regulations adopted and put into effect March 9 by the Strip Mining and Reclamation Commission.

Understandably, Montgomery said, the new Law has resulted in some confusion and the mistaken belief that the strip-mine problem can be solved swiftly and surely. He offered these explanations:

—Law or not law, stripped lands cannot be restored overnight; trees and vegetation must have to grow, but even then, the land will not regain its original potential.

—Streams blackened by coal washers at underground mines come under the authority of the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission, not the Division of Strip Mining and Reclamation.

For the first time, the water commission is stepping into the strip-mine regulation field—whenever water contamination appears. The Commission and three State Departments, Conservation, Mines and Minerals and Fish and Wildlife Resources, are working together to enforce the new law.

In the pre-law days, an estimated 50,000 acres of land were stripped and abandoned by coal operators. In Eastern Kentucky last March and April, some of these disturbed areas were planted in Pine Seedlings and grasses by fathers employed under a Federal-State Public Works program.

The workers, who earn $1.00 an hour, also build small dams to check the flow of silt downstream and try to stop improper drainage from old mines. They perform a variety of other chores—from fighting fires to repairing roads and streets.

Governor Breathitt decided to use jobless fathers as a labor force rather than require strip-mine operators to pay an additional fee for restoring the so-called "orphan banks". Later, the work program will extend to other depressed areas in the State.

Prior to his State employment in 1960, Montgomery was a Soil Conservation District Supervisor, a professional farm manager and a member of the State Legislature for one term. He owns a 540-acre farm near Versailles.

Here are the main provisions of the new Law:

—The operators shall, not may, carry out some reclamation procedures as covering coal seams and auger holes with compacted dirt, sealing break-throughs, handling surface water to avoid erosion and pollution, and burying materials which would produce acid or be a fire hazard.

—All grading of stripped lands must be kept current with the operation; planting must be completed in one year unless conditions do not permit it.

—The State has 30 days to approve or reject reclamation plans submitted by operators prior to issuance of a permit (the old Law allowed operations for 60 days without a plan).

—Operators must post bond on access roads and include them in reclamation plans (the old Law did not include access roads).

—Applicants for a permit must certify that no one in the company has ever violated the Strip Mine Law or had a bond forfeited.

—An operator may contract with the State to do his reclamation work (not in the old law).

—The State can use State and/or Federal money to reclaim land stripped before laws required operators to post bonds.

—Acreage fees paid by operators were increased from $15.00 to $25.00 an acre.

—Maximum performance bonds of operators were increased from $250.00 to $500.00 per acre and the total minimum bond from $1,000.00 to $2,000.00.

Perry County Principals Meeting Held May 19

By H. C. Robertson

E. S. Whisman of Viper visited in Combs last week. Mrs. Jane Elam was admitted to the Hazard Regional Hospital recently.
